

NANCY KROHNGOLD confesses she may be a category of one: "I'm a white Jewish woman making pork barbecue." Explaining her affinity for North Carolina style barbecue, she jokes: "I went to Camp Blue Star in Hendersonville, North Carolina, one summer in the '60's, and an African-American pit master waved at our camp bus!"

Raised in Sarasota, Krohngold took turns at secretarial work, sales, food service, law school and graphic design. But her personal passion was always food and cooking, and eight years ago a New York Times story inspired Nancy to make Carolina style barbecue pulled pork. She was smitten by the process and the incomparable flavor of the finished product. Soon Krohngold was accepting orders for pork barbecue dinners, and was catering events and staging "stealth" lunch concessions at venues announced through social media.

Krohngold opened Nancy's Bar-B-Q in Historic Burns Square in downtown Sarasota in March, 2011.
